Access to Justice Work

Resources for Pro Se Patrons

In a perfect world, every individual who needed legal help, regardless of income or the nature of the legal issue, would be able to receive high-quality affordable representation from a lawyer. However, 80% of low-income people in the United States do not get the legal assistance they need. While the right to an attorney is guaranteed for criminal matters, it is not for civil legal matters, such as landlord-tenant disputes, family law matters, and small business disputes.

Saint Louis has several wonderful organizations that offer free and reduced-price legal services in civil law cases for those in need. Yet all of them must turn away many potential clients due to a lack of staff and funding. Many organizations have strict guidelines determining who they can help and with what types of legal matters. Also turned away by these organizations are those who earn above certain income thresholds. They earn too much to receive free legal aid from these organizations, but still cannot afford to pay an attorney at standard hourly rates.

If you need a lawyer and cannot get one, you are in a scary place. Not having legal representation could mean the loss of your home, having to file for bankruptcy, or not getting a good custody agreement so you can see your children after a divorce.

Access to Justice Work

Presentation of Legal Research for the Non-lawyer at a Saint Louis County Library

Our library is the only law library currently open to the public in the City of St. Louis. We do not turn anyone away. We help patrons with a wide range of legal research matters. Every week, we see patrons in the library who need this kind of help. We also help those who call in and email us from all over the state.

In the larger St. Louis region, we give presentations in conjunction with Saint Louis County Library on Legal Research for the Non-Lawyer. This is another way we help those who cannot get an attorney learn how to do their own research.

The majority of the people we help with access to justice needs are of low income.

Some handouts for Pro Se Patrons

The Law Library Association is equipped with staff who can help people who cannot afford or cannot find an attorney. While we cannot provide legal representation or give legal advice, we can be a guiding hand showing those who come to us how to do legal research and which forms to fill out. We can direct them to the numerous print resources we have at the library, such as how-to guides for family law matters and manuals on how to navigate the municipal court system. We help provide peace of mind for people afraid of navigating their own legal crises.

Success Stories Accessing Justice

It costs $3,473 per month to provide the legal materials and staff expertise to help our non-attorney patrons who need legal research help.

Meghan's Story:

Meghan called the Law Library Association one afternoon desperate for help. She wanted to know what forms she needed to use for a small claims matter and a state court action that were both worrying her. Fifteen minutes later, after speaking to a staff member at our library, she had the tools she needed to begin representing herself.

"You're an Angel. Thank you so much!" said Meghan to the staff member who helped her.

Arthur's story:

Arthur was representing himself in a federal appeals case. During the time the library was closed to the public due to the COVID-19 pandemic, he emailed library staff numerous times to get copies of United State Code Annotations relevant to his case. He was able to complete his brief with our help and submit it to the Eighth Circuit Court of Appeals.

He wrote to the two staff members who helped him, saying, "I want to thank you both for your assistance in helping me put my brief together for the Eighth Circuit Court of Appeals."

Helping Solo, Small Firm, Newer and Older Lawyers

Lifting the Profession

Michael Downey, Esq., Ethics CLE Presentation

Another major part of the mission of the Law Library Association is to be a resource for attorneys who may be new to law practice or who work on their own or in a small law firm. These attorneys typically cannot afford their own subscriptions to print volumes or digital legal resources vitally important to practicing law. They rely on us to be there for them, using our books and databases. We provide them with the tools they need to strengthen their skills and to keep their practice thriving so they can help more of the individual clients they typically serve. Some join the library as members for a small fee, allowing access to needed legal education credits and other resources they cannot afford to pay for on their own at full market value.

Testimonials from lawyers

It costs $953 to support an attorney with an individual library membership for one year. Membership dues do not cover the actual cost of providing service

Jackie Matreci, Esq, presenting.
a CLE on family law in Missouri

Allen's Story: Allen is an older attorney who practices on his own. He is not very comfortable doing online legal research, having learned to do research using law books. During the COVID-19 lockdown, a library staff member worked with him and his daughter to guide him on how to use an online legal database because access to the law books in the library was not an option. He was able to do the research he needed to do with our help.

Said his daughter: "Thank you so much for your help. Your support and commitment have been invaluable."

From a new lawyer with a solo practice whom we helped remotely during a winter storm: "I love getting lost in the hard copy resources of the library and following the trail of cases and additional references, but with the double whammy of pandemic and polar vortex, I understand and am so grateful for your willingness to help remotely."

From a solo lawyer who joined the library as a member in 2018: "This place has been a godsend for my practice. The [membership fee] is a small price to pay for the CLEs [continuing legal education classes] and access to every legal research resource under the sun. The librarians are great and always there to help. I only wish I had discovered it sooner."

Commissioner Clarke with Rosati-Kain Academy field trip

The Law Library Association is committed to putting on programs and hosting exhibits that enlighten the entire St. Louis community about important legal issues and historical events. We take seriously our vision statement, which states “The Law Library Association of St. Louis is where members of the bench, bar, and public come to be educated in the law and law-related topics.” Since 2020, the Law Library has hosted five exhibits and related programming on important touchstone historical events.

Our current exhibit is The Judicial Legacy Project Exhibit: Honoring Trailblazers in our Courts. The exhibit opened in September of 2025 and it runs through March of 2026. Several hundred people have seen this exhibit so far, including those at our opening event and those coming for individual and group tours. Said one student from Rosati-Kain Academy, who came to see this exhibit and hear from honoree the Honorable Anne-Marie Clarke, “I think it was a great experience to hear Ms. Anne-Marie Clarke’s back story. It was very inspiring and informative.”

The Freedom Suits exhibit is also still available for viewing at the library. It is now a permanent exhibit in our Buder Lounge. This exhibit includes rarely-seen court pleadings by enslaved people seeking their freedom. The exhibit also includes explanatory panels about Freedom Suits in St. Louis and in Missouri, and a timeline of the Freedom Suits in comparison with other events taking place in the United States in the 1800s. One of our exhibit visitors expressed “Thank you so much for the wonderful tour of the Freedom Suits exhibit, [including the] interesting and powerful talk of [curator] Bill Glankler.”

Educating the Public on Historic and Legal Issues

It costs $2,029 to mount an exhibit and organize related events.

Lynne Jackson, the great-great-granddaughter of Dred and Harriet Scott, speaking at the opening of Faces of Dred Scott exhibit

In 2023, we hosted the Faces of Dred Scott. This exhibit ran from March 7 to April 17, 2023. We held three related programs leading up to and during the exhibit's run. All had a focus on the Dred Scott case and the Missouri Freedom Suits. Our program on the Life, Times, and Freedom Suits of Dred and Harriet Scott was called "exceptional" and "amazing" and the historical perspective provided by Dred Scott descendant Lynne Jackson was called "a moment in living history." Several hundred people attended one or more events connected to this exhibit and were enriched by what they learned.

Audience at opening event for Lawyers Without Rights

From March 2020 through December 2021, the library hosted the Lawyers Without Rights: Jewish Lawyers in Germany Under the Third Reich. This exhibit and four related lectures attracted hundreds of attendees of diverse backgrounds. Our program on the creation of the International Criminal Court was called "fascinating and informative." Our program on Jewish lawyers and the fight against fascism was called "excellent," "fascinating" and "engaging."

Simply put, our exhibits and related programming provide our visitors with real stories about real people in history and law. By diving into these stories, we foster important and necessary conversations about historical and contemporary questions.

Legally Reading Book Discussion Group

It costs $1,050 to run the Legally Reading book club for a year

Members of the Legally Reading book discussion group

Our Book Club reaches readers throughout the region.

"I so enjoy the books that are selected and the robust discussions." Althea R.

"Thank you so much for going above and beyond to keep me in the loop as a participant in your [book] discussion group. It makes me proud to continue learning and discussing the times we live in." Nancy J.

Since 2018, our Legally Reading Book Discussion Group, co-sponsored with Saint Louis Public Library, has provided a vehicle for members of the St. Louis community, lawyers and non-lawyers alike, to read and discuss books with legal and social justice themes. Topics covered have included racial justice (Caste, The Other Wes Moore), disability rights (Haben: The Deafblind Woman who Conquered Harvard Law), and St. Louis history (The Last Children of Mill Creek). Our book club members are diverse in age, race, and geographic location. It takes staff time and resources to run this program. Your donation will help support Legally Reading.

Judicial Legacy Project

It costs $358 to create, edit, and display each interview for our website.

Judge Nicole Colbert-Botchway, Judge Evelyn Baker and Commissioner Anne-Marie Clarke

Conceived by the Honorable Nicole Colbert-Botchway, a Law Library Association of St. Louis Board Member, the Judicial Legacy Project is a program that involves interviewing retired judges and jurists in our 22nd Judicial Circuit and other Missouri Courts. It also includes remembrance videos of retired judges no longer with us. Many of the judges profiled were among the first women and members of the African American community to serve in this role. Their reflections and insights are preserved through this project. Video highlights of their remarks are available for all to view and learn from on our website. The Law Library is proud to be a repository for the stories of these local judicial giants.
